

ANTONY PIPE

Terrains Vagues

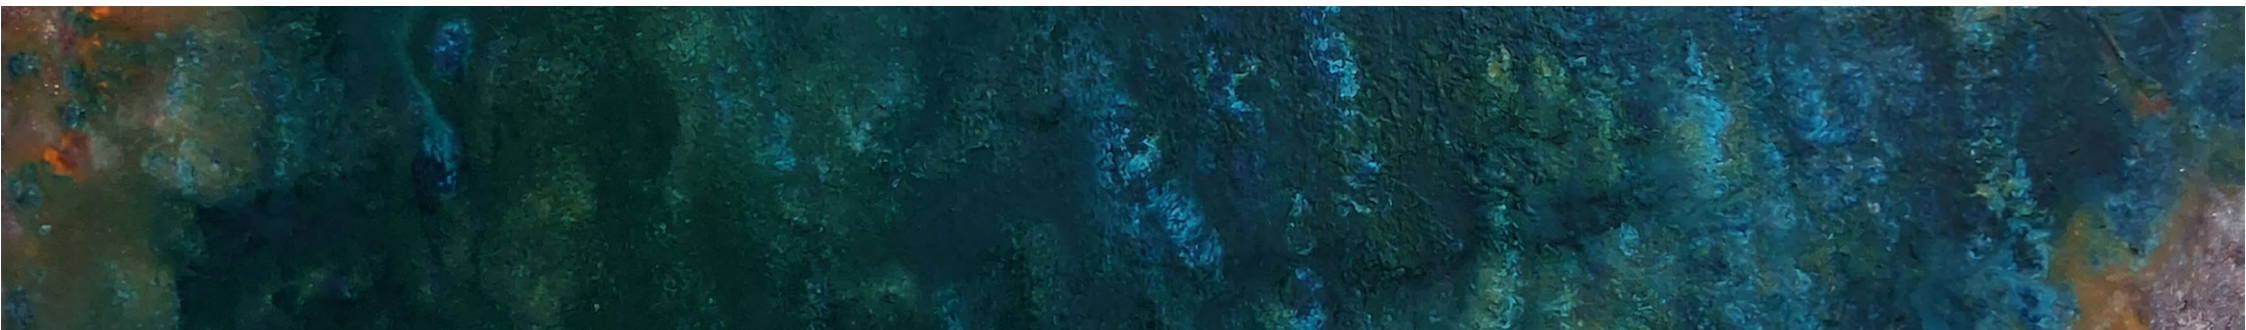

2025 - 2026

About the Series

Terrains Vagues takes its name from the urbanist concept of indeterminate space, those abandoned or neglected territories that exist outside the logic of productive land use, neither fully natural nor fully claimed. Pipe's work draws on a specific landscape of excavated ponds, spaces shaped by human intervention and then left to find their own equilibrium. What interested him was not the abandonment itself but what follows it, the slow, self-regulating processes by which nature reasserts itself over the traces of human presence. The work sits with that tension, finding in it something melancholic and quietly beautiful.

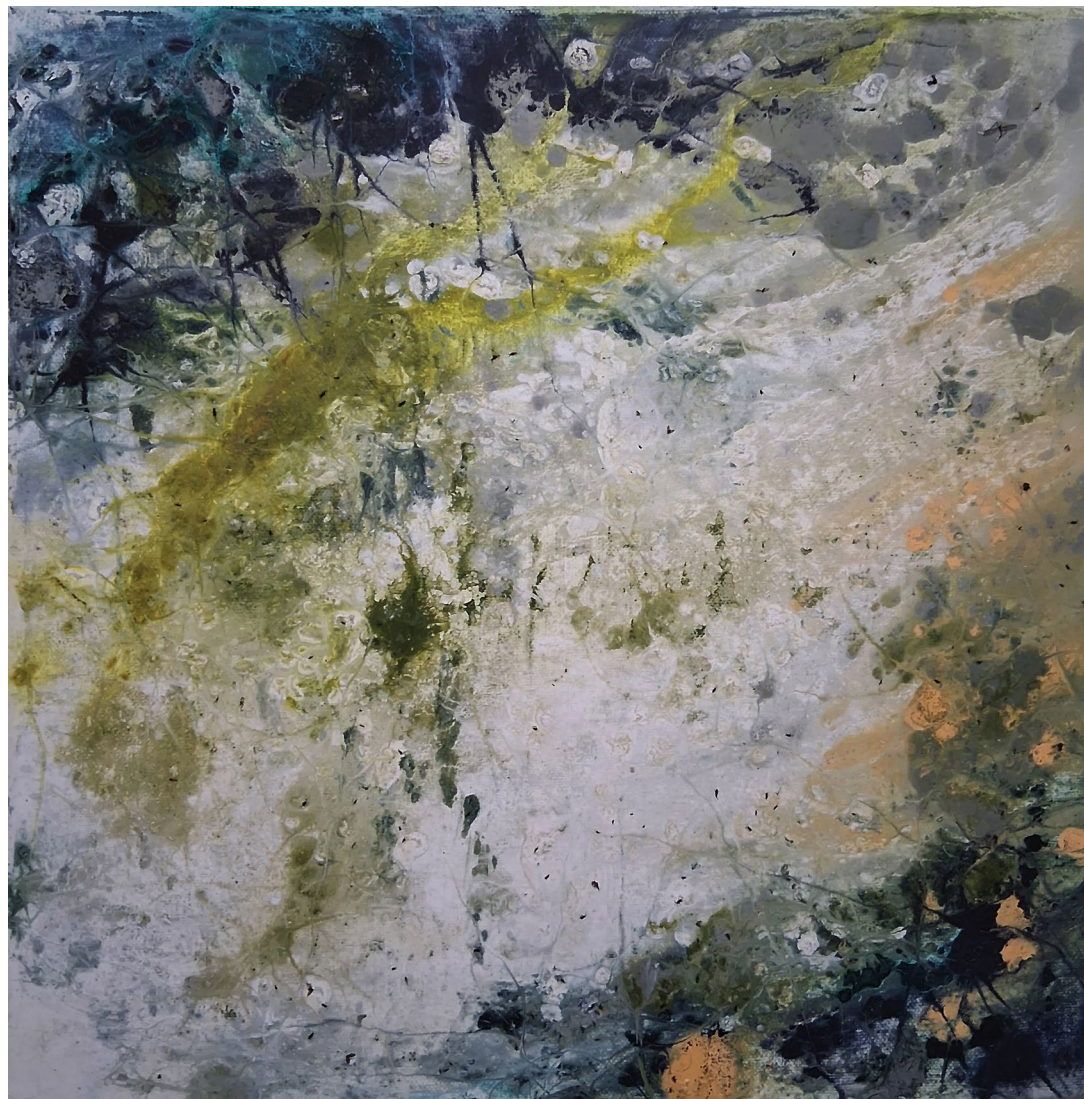

Working in oil on canvas and watercolour, Pipe responds to this landscape through abstraction rather than representation. These are not paintings of a place but of an experience of a place, of its atmosphere, its thresholds and its residues. The formal qualities of the work, its layering, its tonal depth and its soft edges, echo the processes of weathering, submersion and gradual transformation that define the landscapes from which it emerges.
